

House-rich, but savings-poor. What does it mean for your clients? retirement?

Submitted by Emily on May 25, 2016 - 2:02pm

Image not readable or empty
Manulife Bank logo

Image not readable or empty
Manulife Bank logo

The latest Manulife Bank Homeowner Debt Survey reveals many Canadians find it difficult to pay for today and plan for tomorrow.

- Only 4 in 10 are very confident they'll save enough for retirement
- 1 in 4 expect home equity to make up more than 80% of their wealth at retirement

Faced with rising housing costs, homeowners struggle to balance saving, debt repayment and daily expenses.

Many may arrive at retirement house-rich, but savings-poor, which could require them to make difficult decisions:

- retire later than planned
- accept a lower standard of living
- downsize their home
- borrow against home equity

Helping your clients achieve the right balance of saving, spending and debt repayment can start with a simple conversation. Visit the Debt Solutions Centre on Repsource where you'll find tips to start the conversations, debt-management worksheets, and more insights to support your advice.

Source URL: <https://www.globalpacific.ca/bulletins/manulife-bank/2016-05-25/house-rich-savings-poor-what-does-it-mean-your-clients%E2%80%99-retirement>